Agricultural Safety for the Next Generation of Farmers

Developing and delivering the course ‘Managing Agricultural Safety’ for agricultural diploma students at the University of Manitoba provided the perfect opportunity to determine how to best teach farm safety to positively impact behavior at the farm level.

Only by changing the behavior of farmers will we begin to see a reduction in the number of farm injuries and fatalities. This presentation will explore the barriers and enablers present in farm safety, introduce behavior-changing strategies from various disciplines, and describe how the course design was shaped by this information.

The conclusion will identify how the successful strategies are being incorporated into the Manitoba Farm Safety Program’s service offerings for farmers.
